The most stunning feature of The Madison is the large rooftop spread over all four towers. It is embellished with greenery and seating arrangements here and there. A gym and prayer space for women is available on the rooftop. These fantastic amenities along with smart home features and all-around security make The Madison a desirable place to live with your family.

COVID-19 IMPACTS ON HOUSING FINANCE

The housing industry is a globally elemental sector. The more developed a country the more dynamic its property market is. It does not only provide physical shelter but also affects the holistic well-being of the citizens. This is why the housing finance sector of a developing country like Bangladesh did not suffer much during the pandemic. Construction work got postponed, not canceled. People opting for home loans usually belong to the upper SECs is why their plans were not hindered along with the owner-financed builders. It is a time-tested observation that investment in real-estate is scarcely ever a bad idea when the ROI and value expansion overtime is always on the positive quadrant of the graph.
